

Lee Evans Partnership receives double nomination in RICS South East Awards 2011 06.06.11

Lee Evans Partnership received nominations for two projects, both in the Community Benefit category, in the recent 2011 RICS Awards, South East. The two projects St Jude's Church, Southsea and The Neville Childhood Epilepsy Centre, Lingfield, Surrey impressed the judges with the contribution they make to the local community.

The awards were held in historic Brighton, home of some of the most iconic examples of excellence in the built environment in recent centuries.

Jerry Percy, Chairman of RICS South East Regional Board praised the standard of entries this year and said, "It is clear that a high proportion of entries across all the categories will create real benefit for communities across the region, not only in terms of the function of the building but in design, quality of construction and aesthetics.

In the current challenging economic conditions it is encouraging to see that the quality of the entries together with the inspiration and talent that lies behind each of the projects sets new standards for the region's built environment of the future and the judges would like to congratulate all those who have made their task such a challenging undertaking."
