

The shortlisted scheme,
Woodbourne Gardens,
at Wallington, Surrey

Lee Evans Partnership shortlisted as finalist for the 2008 Sustainable Housing Awards

Lee Evans Partnership has been shortlisted in the Low Energy Social Housing Project of the Year category of The Sustainable Housing Awards 2008, organised by Inside Housing magazine for their housing scheme Woodbourne Gardens, in Wallington, Surrey, designed for Bourne Housing Society Ltd (a subsidiary of Moat).

The event is the first awards scheme in the UK to focus on the best “green” social housing projects constructed in the UK, and the organisations responsible for them. The trophies will be presented at a suitably “eco” awards ceremony at the Hilton Hotel in London’s Park Lane on Tuesday 11 November. More than 130 entries were received for the awards, which will be hosted by top impressionist, and keen environmental campaigner Alistair McGowan.

Ted Stevens, Inside Housing’s events director and the organiser of the awards said: “We’ve had a terrific response and Lee Evans Partnership has done brilliantly to get shortlisted from such a huge field. Britain is leading the way on sustainable housing and innovative building techniques so we’re delighted we’re able to organise a ceremony to reward that organisations that are delivering best practice.” The sponsors of the awards include Wates Living Space, EPS Social Housing, Civica, Axis and the NHBC.

To find out more about the awards, the judges and each of the finalists go to insidehousing.co.uk and click on the events section.

For further details contact:
Lee Evans Partnership, St John’s Lane, Canterbury, Kent CT1 2QQ